

WEIL'S DISEASE

Weil's Disease is a RARE but very serious illness which is caused by bacteria carried in the urine of rats (and some other animals). It can be contracted anywhere but especially around waterways. The descending scale of risk is: Stagnant water, canals and slow-moving rivers (particularly after flash floods), swifter streams.

Precautions:

Avoid capsizing or rolling in stagnant or slow-moving water

Wash or shower after canoeing

Cover minor scratches on exposed parts of the body with water-proof plaster

Use footwear to avoid cutting feet

Should you become ill after canoeing (2-19 days) with a flu-like illness (temperature, aching limbs & joints) call your doctor and tell him/her you are a canoeist and that you may have come into contact with the Leptospirosis bacteria.

Contact the PaddleUK for more information.

Participants should be aware of and accept these risks and be responsible for their own action and involvement.

Water quality advice for paddlers

Cover cuts and abrasions, including blisters, with waterproof dressings.

Avoid swallowing river water. Keep your water bottle clean and dry.

Check the weather. Poor water quality is more likely after heavy rain.

Check, clean, dry equipment to remove contamination and invasive species.

Always wash your hands before eating or drinking.

If you become sick, contact your GP with details of when and where you paddled.

Report pollution to the Environment Agency hotline: 0800 807060
